Summary: Takes place 10 years after the events of the show, where the Crystal Gems successfully dismantle the cluster and fend off a homeworld frigate. The humans take advantage of the gem technology from the frigate and start constructing their own models of the ships, using more efficient FTL engines, something that homeworld doesn't have. Rated T due to sadism and other stuff.

1. Chapter 1

A/N: This is just a sample of what will come in the actual story, that's why it's so short.

A small ship is on recon, scanning planets suspected of harboring gem colonies. After about an hour of recon, it proceeds to the next planet, the process repeats itself for a while until the scan comes up positive. The scans transmit their results to a computer, which projects a hologram of a functioning kindergarten. The crew of the ship, notably human, gather around the hologram, examining it.

After examining the hologram, one of the technicians looks at the captain of the ship.

"Orders?" The technician asks.

"Charge the FTL engines and save the scan results, we need to report this."

The technicians rush to their stations, rapidly typing on their computers.

"20 seconds until launch, sir."

"Sir, incoming dreadnought!"

A hole is blown into the ship by the incoming homeworld dreadnought, the ship shakes, the FTL engines are damaged and start to malfunction. A group of quartz soldiers board the ship, armed with laser weaponry and some melee weapons.

The crew rush to the armory, grabbing large gem destabilizing rifles with bayonets and prepare to fight the quartz soldiers. The captain starts to run to the computer, in order to send the scan data back to Earth.

"Kill them all!" A Japser yells.

They fire their laser weaponry and charge at the crew, their melee weapons clash with their rifles, smoke and blood fills the ship. Screams of pain can be heard on both sides. The captian is shot in the spine after sending the scan results.

After a while, the fighting ends, the humans lay dead, and many Quartz gemstones lay on the ground in shards.

Update: Fixed the separation between the sections not showing up.

10 years ago, Beach City.

The air is filled with smoke, bullets, and lasers. The Crystal Gems were fighting against a large Homeworld Frigate, sent to eliminate the dwellers of this planet, referred to locally as: Earth. It landed and unloaded it's large cargo of fresh and old Quartz soldiers, the Quartz soldiers rushed out of the frigate, ready to obliterate the Crystal Gems and these pathetic "humans" as they are called.

The Quartz warriors realized that they have underestimates these human's firepower, their rifles and automatics were poofing and shattering them with just a few pulls of the trigger. The Quartz were able to reach a few humans, chopping them, one by one, limb by limb. The ones that wielded bludgeons knocked their opposition unconscious and then beat them into a bloody pulp. The Frigate started firing upon the humans, and they were starting to lost numbers, quickly.

The Crystal Gems were able to uncorrupt two of the corrupted gems by submerging them in Rose's healing fountain for around 7 months. It was Steven who came up with the idea, after Peridot informed them about the approaching frigate. One of them, a Dumortierite, was armed with a musket-esque weapon with a bayonet at the end, she wore the uniform of a typical Grenadier of Napoleon's Imperial Guard, her skin was a dark shade of blue and her eyes were a lighter shade of blue. She was seen stabbing incoming Quartz warriors with the bayonet, and firing at ones a good distance away. Her musket was nearly enough to poof a Quartz in one well placed hit, as the ball of energy had a moderate amount of destabillizing energy within it, produced from her gem.

The other gem, an Aquamarine, wore a biker's helmet that was colored white, she also wore a jacket that was colored black, and her pants were also dark black, she charged into battle with only her knuckle dusters. Her boots had spikes on the bottoms, making her kick ever so slightly more powerful. She could be seen charging and drop-kicking multiple Quartz warriors and rapidly punching them to poof them.

After a while of fighting, Pearl could be seen conversing with a general of the United States military in a makeshift bunker.

"The President has contacted the United Nations, and they've agreed to help in the war effort.", said the General.

"Just how many troops will arrive, General?"

"They're sending troops in the thousands, I can't give you an approximate amount. I'm going to call in an artillery bombardment on that Frigate, just hold out for a bit longer."

Pearl sighed, she doubted that the Human's military would be able to puncture the frigate. She tried thinking of a backup plan, in case the humans could not break the Frigate's hull, until she saw Amethyst get struck in her gem, poofing instantly, a large crack forms on it.

Pearl rushed to Amethyst's aid, fending off an opposing Quartz soldier, the Quartz's Maul was parried by Pearl's spear. Pearl performed a quick riposte using the hilt of her spear. The Quartz fell on the ground, in a stunned state, before poofing from the blade of pearl's spear.

Pearl retrieved Amethyst's gem and went looking for Steven, and then came the Artillery shells.

The Captain awoke, slumped down in his chair, quickly logging on to the terminal in front of him. He saw that the ship was running in low-power mode, and it's life-support was declining at a steady rate. The Captain tried to get up from his chair, only to find that the laser that hit his spine had paralyzed him from the waste down. The Captain turned off the artificial gravity and began to float.

He then proceeded to the Medbay, grabbing onto the walls and propelling himself forward. He needed to get to the array of nanobot medical equipment that lay there, so he could repair his damaged spine. After a few minutes of propelling himself with the walls, he reached the Medbay and opened the doors. He saw an unconscious medic with a cracked quartz gem in his left hand, and a gem destabillizing knife in his other. There appeared to be a large bump on his head, he was likely to have a life-threatening concussion.

The Captain saw the nanobot medical equipment on the right of the room, he activated it and programmed it to medicate his spine. He then injected it near his spine, and the nanobots proceeded to repair it using a synthetic spine. After a few minutes, the nanobots retreated to the equipment to recharge.

He then reprogrammed the machine and injected it into his comrade, and nanobots rushed out to medicate the unconscious body's head, and after a few seconds, the bump started to shrink into nothing.

He would then lose his consciousness as the synthetic spine connected itself to his nervous system, right after he saw the medic regaining his consciousness.

A/N: The 2 OCs displayed in the first section will be developed later in the story, once the setting shifts to present day earth.

I wish to inform you that I am accepting OC requests, PM me an OC you want to see in the story, and I will review it.

Also accepting chapter suggestions.

The Captain regained consciousness a few minutes later, his artificial spine has successfully linked itself to his nervous system, and he can now move his legs. He noticed that the artificial gravity was reactivated, so he walked to the control room, where he met the medic. The medic was working on the control panel and noticed his captain walking to him.

"So you're finally awake, are ye?" The captain said.

The medic got a good look at his captain, he wore a black suit with a few medals on it, awarded to him for multiple deeds he has done on the battlefield. He also has a laser pistol in a holster on his left hip. His boots had metal soles on them, equipped to all crew members of a ship, as they are connected to the artificial gravity systems. He had a few scars on his face from battle wounds suffered in his field days, and he wore a black bicorne with a symbol of a golden eagle on it.

"Aye, I've re-enabled the artificial gravity, and I've smashed that Quartz gem." The medic said, pointing to gem shards on the floor.

"Good job, lad, didn't know a medic would have such a blood thirst in 'em." He chuckled after saying this. "Get up, lad, I'm going to activate the repair drones."

The medic got up off the Captain's seat. The Captain sat down, typing away on the terminal. A buzzing is heard in the distance, and then sounds of tools working on something became audible.

After a few minutes of waiting, the FTL engines regained their functionality. The Captain set the ship's course for earth, then the two sat down at the large meeting table.

Back on the gem colony, the Dreadnought from before has landed into a large hanger, and is being refueled.

A large Jasper steps out of the Dreadnought, she wore a black suit with a diamond insignia on the top-right, a small chip lay in the middle of said insignia. The Jasper walked to a nearby Peridot, who scanned the chip, and then looked up at the Jasper, a fearful expression lay on her face. The Jasper smirked at the Peridot's fear.

"Contact the districts of Colonization and Military Affairs, Peridot."

"Y-yes, 'mam." The Peridot stammered.

She used her limb enhancers to create a screen, after a few seconds pass, both of her limb enhancers create screens, which show Yellow and Black diamond's pearls.

"This is the district of Military Affairs and the district of Colonization, what is it you inquire?" They speak in unison.

"This is Jasper, commanding officer of the dreadnought 015C, I am requesting to speak to Yellow and Black diamond about a problematic discovery."

The pearls start tapping on their screens, and then the screens show Yellow and Black diamond, they look impatient.

"What is the meaning of this?" Yellow Diamond says with a look of annoyance, as Black Diamond stays silent.

"It's the humans, they've somehow produced ships capable of space flight."

"What?" They both yell. "How in the hell could they hav-"

"I believe it is due to the defeat of one of our Frigates that occurred nearly 10 years ago, on the planet of Earth." Says Black Diamond.

"Is that so? Well then, Black Diamond, I think we need to take these humans more seriously." Yellow Diamond suggested.

"Agreed. I will begin preparations for a full-scale invasion using every ship we can muster. Jasper, return to homeworld immediately."

"Yes, my Diamond." Jasper said, turning off the transmission and ordering the Peridots to refuel faster.

The scouting ship enters the troposphere of earth, near Hawaii, of which has been made into a spaceship centre for scouting and combat based ships. It is busting with activity, most of the buildings are made from iron that originated from Mercury. The sky is filled to the brim with mining ships transporting minerals from other planets. You can sometimes see a bit of sunlight if you're a lucky man.

The ship lands in a hangar, full of other scouting ships that look of similar design. As soon as they landed, a buzzer sounded, a squadron of militants and engineers rush to the ship, accompanied by repair and combat drones. A general appears before them from the crowd of men.

"You two the only ones on that ship, there?" The General said to the Captain.

"Aye, we were raided by the bloody gems, we were the only two that survived."

"Good thing your here, then, we received your scan results and are prepping an assault force against that colony. We are putting you in charge of one of our Frigates in this assault."

"The Frigates are finished? I thought they would take a couple more years."

"Things start speeding up when you are able to receive support from nearly every nation in the world, can't it?" The General chuckled.

"Alright, General." The Captain said. "When are we going to launch the assault?"

"It should take around 3 weeks to finish the Frigate's weaponry, so relax, Captain, you need it."

The Captain happily took his offer, and was escorted to his home, Mars, via colony ship.

He could finally see his family again.
